When the Endeavour arrived at the coast of Australia the crew saw Gadigal people of the Eora nation fishing in canoes they called nawi. Nawi are three to four metres long and made from tree bark folded and tied with cord. The Gadigal people used nawi for transport, fishing and collecting water birds’ eggs.